

Sun Mountain Shines Ever Brighter

A Bag that Doubles as a Cart and Stylish Outerwear Highlight 2014

8

While high-tech gadgets were the unofficial theme of this year's PGA Show, Sun Mountain managed to break new ground in other ways. Start with its Combo Cart, a push cart and golf bag in one. It folds small for storage in the trunk and opens easily for use. If you leave it in the club storage room it'll take up about half of the space of a separate cart and bag. When it's time to hit the course; simply swing the front wheel into place, release the rear wheels, and set the handle height. Combo also offers a built-in seat including a back pad. It retails for $469. Next up is the Three 5 carry bag. Completely redesigned for 2014, the Three 5 uses the new, patent-pending Auto-Fit Dual Strap System, which is easy to get on and off, easy to adjust and works well as a single strap for short carries. Weighing less than four pounds, the Three 5 is designed to be carried. It's available in golf shops now with a retail price of $189. Finally, we've got to give a shout-out to Sun Mountain's always-solid outerwear, this year led by Cumulus — Sun Mountain's most breathable golf rain suit to date, offering the light weight of 2.5 layer technology with a two-year waterproof guarantee. Incorporating 2.5 layer technology, Cumulus has a woven shell laminated to a waterproof, breathable membrane, with a protective inner layer. During the golf swing it slides over clothing rather than catching and offering resistance to the swing. Cumulus is available now in men's full-zip jacket ($129) and pants ($119).

The Follow-Through Missoula, Mont.-based Sun Mountain's wide array of carts, bags and outerwear has long been among the top-performing products for active golfers.
